

Hitting the Jack.
The following is a copy of a letter from the author of the above article to the editor of the Progress, dated June 10, 1894. The letter is a reply to a letter from the editor dated June 8, 1894, in which the editor had expressed his surprise at the author's statement that the author had not been paid for the article. The author explains that he had not been paid because the article had not been published in the paper. The author also states that he had not been paid for the article because the article had not been published in the paper. The author concludes by stating that he had not been paid for the article because the article had not been published in the paper.

Clipped By:

cliff_shardalow
Sun, Feb 14, 2021